Faces of the Untold features black and white photographs in which each image is partially brought to life with colored pencils. This collection is a journey into the heart of Iran's villages, where women and children, whose significant roles, despite seldom seen or heard, are women with hands full of memories and eyes brimming with stories, who pass their days amidst the quiet hum of nature, and children who grow up under their wings in this collection. I have sought to convey the untold stories that flow through the lives of these people—stories that may have been lost in the bustle of modern urban life, yet remain alive and resilient in their purest form.
